

Kering on behalf of GucciMedia Statement

Kering takes the health and responsible management of its Houses' supply chains very seriously.

The Group has procedures in place dedicated to protecting its employees and workers in its supply chains and expects all its partners to adhere to the Kering Code of Ethics.

Since 2015, Kering has implemented robust protocols to mitigate the risk of inappropriate practices through a collaborative control system with suppliers. These protocols aim to implement a comprehensive set of actions and procedures to ensure effective monitoring of the supply chain, assessing compliance with key parameters relating to the working environment, social and environmental standards, security, quality, and financial discipline.

Since 2015, Kering has carried out more than 30,000 audits worldwide, both announced and unannounced. In 2024 alone, the Group carried out more than 2,200 audits.

Kering remains strongly committed to a sustainable and socially responsible supply chain for the benefit of our stakeholders, guided by a spirit of full transparency and traceability.
